Introductory

HE twenty-first bi-ennial Directory of the cities of New Albany and Jeffersonville is herewith presented to the public.

The New Albany Directory contains 13,556 individual names, which would indicate a total population of 27,112, using 2 as a multiple. This includes Silver Hills and Lower Albany. Since the last directory was published Silver Grove has been officially declared part of the corporation of New Albany, and Silver Hills and Lower Albany have long been considered virtually so. The estimate of population is conservative, some directory compilers using 21/2 as a multiple. The canvass, carefully made, shows an increase of 55 individual names compared with 1913, or an increase of 110 in population. After all, quality counts in population more than quantity, and it is maintained that since New Albany celebrated her centennial anniversary, in 1913, her citizens have shown more civic pride and her merchants and manufacturers have exhibited a more apparent effort to promote the general welfare than heretofore. This is forcibly illustrated in the organization and work of the New Albany Chamber of Commerce, comprising several hundred of the leading men of the city, embracing all lines of activity, who are doing much in the attempt to restore the city to the place it once held-the second, if not the first city in Indiana, in trade and commerce. It is hoped to attain this end if the members of the Chamber of Commerce cohere as they are now happily doing. A nine-foot river stage in the Ohio will at least, it is hoped, restore the city's river commerce.

The Mayor and Common Council is doing its part officially to bring about needful improvements such as the reconstruction and repair of worn-out streets, a laudable effort to keep the present streets clean, a reduction of the municipal bonded debt and a consequent reduction of city taxes.

With all of these things in view, and the probability of all citizens uniting in the future to make the city better morally and physically, the outlook for New Albany may be said to be most encouraging. Notwithstanding the depression throughout the nation, caused mostly by the European war, New Albany manufactories have been kept fairly active, and the outlook is most encouraging. The Jeffersonville Directory, embracing Port Fulton, Ohio Falls, Clarksville, Howard Park and Claysburg, contains 7,799 individual names, indicating a population of 15,598, using 2 as a multiple. Owing to the fact that the city's largest manufactory—the Jeffersonville branch of the American Car and Foundry Company—has built few cars at this plan since the European war commenced, quite a number of the employes were compelled to seek employment, at least temporarilly, in other places, the compilers of this directory found 259 individual names less than two years ago when the returns showed a total of 8,058 individual names. The fact, too, that the Pennsylvania railroad changed its treminals from Jefferson-ville to Indianapolis had to do with the removal of a number of families, this slightly decreasing the population, although quite a number of new families have moved to the city. It was not through a spirit of dissatisfaction that anyone removed from the city.

Notwithstanding the apparent decrease in population and the temporary depression in Big Business the leading men of Jeffersonville are optimistic of the future. Jeffersonville will always have its great shipyards with the finest harbor on the Ohio, and when a nine-foot stage is secured in the river the Howard's will build hundreds of boats where they now build one. The city will always have its great car building plant, its United States Quartermaster's Depot, and will continue to do its best to restore to good citizenship the many wayward men sent to the Indiana Reformatory. Jeffersonville is looking upward and forward.

The publishers wish to thank the business men and the citizens generally for the continued support given them in publishing the New Albany and Jeffersonville City Directory.
